

Desert Spring by Adrian Mowry

I walk for miles with water on my mind
The sun's message burns my eyes
A drink so pure I know that I must find
To quench this thirst I look to the skies
A caravan passed me late last night
With bitter words they warned me of my path
I waved them on kept by the firelight
With many doubts I fell asleep at last
I've heard a million dreams have been swallowed by these sands
I know a million more will be traveling across this land
So I watch the sky and pray for rain
Will this desert spring be found again
My family is so far from here
Those comforts are another's life
So I seek this well so deep and clear
Just one taste is worth a lifetime of strife
Just one taste is worth a lifetime of strife
I've heard a million dreams have been swallowed by these sands
I know a million more will be traveling across this land
So I watch the sky and pray for rain
Will this desert spring be found again
